TERMS OF SERVICE

INTRODUCTION

Grouply is a retail energy comparison service provided by 4th Party Australia Pty Ltd (Service).

4th Party offers the Service via whitelabel distribution partners as a courtesy to help you make better decisions when choosing between the terms of market retail contracts (Energy Plans) offered by energy retailers. Wherever you see “Powered by Grouply” or words to similar effect, it means that you are using the Service subject to these Terms of Service.

You will need to provide the Service with your post code and current information on your energy usage, or information from which energy usage can be derived which will allow the Service to compare the generally available Energy Plans available and relevant to you.

Under these Terms of Service, you will give your consent to the Company obtaining this information.

The Company takes privacy and confidentiality very seriously, and as such voluntarily complies with the Australian Privacy Principles set out in the Privacy Act. The Company will keep all of your information securely and will only ever use your information to enable you to complete an application to purchase an Energy Plan from the energy retailer of your choice, or to provide your details to Partners with your consent.

The Service is independent of all Energy Retailers. Energy Retailers may pay license fees for access to the Service or commissions for sales completed via the Service. However the presence or absence of fees or commissions does not impact the ranking of the Energy Plans compared by the Service. Where the Service is eligible to receive commissions from an Energy Retailer, the Service will make you aware of this before assisting you to apply for an Energy Plan.
